Comedian Russell Brand unveils a new mosaic in Hackney Downs, created by members of the community and the Hackney Drug and Alcohol Team's project, Lifeline

A BEAUTIFUL mosaic has been unveiled in Hackney Downs by comedian Russell Brand.

The artwork, which was officially opened on 6 November, is the third in a series across Hackney designed by artist Tessa Hunkin. It is the result of a nine-month project undertaken by members of the community and the Hackney Drug and Alcohol Team project, Lifeline, which helps people recovering from addiction. Former drug addict Russell said: "The mosaic is something the whole community can be proud of." See page 7 for more.

THE HACKNEY 100

YOUNG people have taken their first career steps thanks to the 'Hackney 100' scheme which gives teenagers the chance to gain paid work with leading local businesses.

The Council initiative, which was launched in June, is set to give 15 to 17-year-olds a realistic taste of working life while still in education. The first 100 are due to be in post by January, earning the London Living Wage of £8.80 per hour. The placements last from six months to one year, offering a chance to work in industries including design, media, fashion, hospitality, catering, technology, engineering and finance.

The first 20 recruits are already settled into their new roles, having passed a rigorous interview process. They are now working four hours a week, after school, with firms including Optimity, Shoreditch Works, Tech City, Bootstrap, Buckley Gray Yeoman, Jason Bruges Studios and more.

Katy Lay, 15, is working as an editorial assistant with Tech City News. She said: "This experience has helped me develop editorial skills, researching and constructing news articles to be published on the website."

Amera Hussain, 15, is working as a finance assistant at the Council. She said: "Hackney 100 has enhanced my professional experience, as well as helping me acquire another level of responsibility."

Businesses are also benefiting from the scheme. Anthony Impey, Chief Executive of telecommunications firm Optimity, said: "It makes this a better place to work because our team feels proud of our involvement in projects like Hackney 100."

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, added: "The Hackney 100 initiative was launched to harness the growing number of opportunities in the borough, providing young people with paid work experience whilst laying the foundations for future careers.

"Bringing business and investment to areas where there are high levels of deprivation has the potential to change the lives of thousands of people. It's our job to make sure that Hackney's economic success is translated into genuine opportunity for the people who live here."

The race is (back) on

THE Run Hackney half marathon is set to return on 10 May next year.

Following a successful debut race in June, which saw 12,500 runners pounding the streets of Hackney, next year's event is expected to sell out fast. Entries are now open, and for a limited time residents can save £5 on their fee.

The 13.1 mile circular route begins and ends in Hackney Marshes and takes in some of the borough's top landmarks. The race will pass through Hackney Downs, Hackney Central,

“ Since June, residents have been telling me how much they enjoyed having a half marathon on their doorstep ”

Broadway Market, Well Street Common, Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park and Mabley Green.

Runners of all ages and abilities are welcome to participate in the fast, closed-road course: from elite athletes to first-time runners. The inaugural race, sponsored by Vitality, delivered impressive results with Kenyan Peter Emase winning the elite men's race in a time of 01:04:19.

He said: “It was a good, flat course.

It was a very well organised race and it was nice to run in Hackney.”

The Council-backed event will once again feature a 12-week schools challenge to encourage children to run a mile a week leading up to the half marathon, with the final mile taking place on race day itself.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “We're thrilled to announce the second Run Hackney half marathon. Ever since June's race, residents have been telling me how much they enjoyed having a half marathon on their doorstep.

“Whether they ran, or took to the streets to watch, there was a real buzz about the borough, and I hope next year's event will be even better.”

Runners can choose to take part on behalf of Cancer Research UK, the official national charity partner, or run for their own good causes. Businesses are also being asked to sign up to the Company Challenge to field a workforce team and raise money for charities.

Entry is £44 for non-affiliated runners and £42 for affiliated runners. A half price concessionary rate is available for residents in receipt of benefits and/or allowances.

Hackney's set to sparkle

Last year's Christmas lights switch-on at Hackney Town Hall Square; cast from this year's Empire panto 'Mother Goose' will flick the switch

THIS year's Christmas lights switch-on is set to take place on 29 November, in Hackney Town Hall Square, marking the start of a bumper month of festive events.

The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sharon Patrick, will do the honours at 5pm. She will be joined by breakfast presenters Kojo and Jade from Capital XTRA radio and characters in this year's Hackney Empire panto 'Mother Goose.'

Residents can join in carol singing with the panto cast and Hackney Community Choir.

Cyclists are also invited

Cyclists are invited to add to this year's Hackney Christmas sparkle to take part by decorating themselves and/or their bikes for a chance to win some fantastic prizes.

People are encouraged to don their brightest fancy dress or festive outfit, light up their bikes, and attend the switch-on.

Categories and prizes, courtesy of A&S Cycles and London Fields Cycles, include: brightest young star (for under-12s) with a chance to win a child's bike; sparkliest decorations to win a waterproof jacket; and most festive decorations and/or fancy dress to win some cycle lights.

All entrants must have a road-legal bicycle with a white light on the front and a red light at the back. The winners will be announced prior at the switch-on.

Look out for a 16-page 'Make Hackney Sparkle' supplement in the next issue of Hackney Today, which will be packed full of information about festive events in the borough this Christmas.

Plans to transform Old Street roundabout unveiled

PROPOSALS to redesign Old Street roundabout, to make the area safer for cyclists and pedestrians, have been unveiled by Transport for London.

The roundabout at London's technology epicentre, known as Tech City, could cease to exist as the new design proposes to introduce two-way traffic by closing the north-western 'arm' between the west of Old Street and the north of City Road. This will create a new public space for pedestrians, including developments such as seating and tree planting.

Other planned improvements include segregated cycle lanes, cycle-friendly traffic signals and five pedestrian crossings.

Research shows that 80 per cent of injuries from collisions on the roundabout, between February 2010 and January last year, involved a pedestrian or cyclist.

A traffic management plan is also being developed because assessments suggest the redesign would result in changes in rush-hour journey times for buses and cars.

News in brief

New taxi marshals in Dalston to help revellers home safely

A NEW team of taxi marshals are now on-hand to help late night travellers get home safely from Dalston.

Based in Ridley Road as part of a pilot project, the marshals help people flag down licensed cabs and coordinate with others going to similar destinations. They also help people leave the area more quickly, and give travellers not using cabs, tips on getting home safely. The Council lobbied Transport for London to turn loading bays in the area into taxi ranks from 7pm to 7am. Local businesses also gave money towards the scheme.

Deputy Mayor, Cllr Sophie Linden, said: "We want people to come and enjoy what Hackney has to offer, but we want them to get home safely. One of the ways to do this is to look for the taxi marshals and take a licensed cab home." The taxi ranks operate from a loading bay outside Boots, near Dalston Kingsland Station, and from the loading bay near Birthdays at 33-35 Stoke Newington Road. There are also marshalled taxi ranks in Shoreditch near the 333 club and outside McDonald's at Liverpool Street Station. The pilot runs until 3 January.

Time to renew Freedom Passes

OLDER people across Hackney whose Freedom Passes expire on 31 March next year will receive a letter in the coming weeks explaining how to renew it.

The pass allows older adults to travel on public transport for free across the capital – as well as on local bus services throughout England at certain times – and is Europe's most comprehensive free travel scheme. Pass holders are being encouraged to renew online or by post. Passes cannot be renewed at the Post Office. Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health Social Care and Culture, said: "Freedom Passes provide free access to transport for many older and disabled residents in Hackney, and so it is important that residents have their passes renewed as soon as they can."

COMMUNITY members of all ages, faiths and backgrounds gathered to honour those who served in both world wars, and later conflicts, on Remembrance Sunday.

The Jewish Lads and Girls' Brigade led a procession – which started at Reading Lane and continued to St John-at-Hackney churchyard – where faith leaders, civic dignitaries, MPs, councillors, veterans, senior officers of the Armed Forces and emergency services gathered to pay their respects on 9 November.

Reverend Naphtali Tiefenbrun, from Hackney and East London Synagogue, sang 'The Memorial Prayer' in Hebrew. Readings were conducted by Faizullah Khan of Hackney Muslim Forum; humanist David Pollock; co-ordinator of the UK Sikh Healthcare Chaplaincy Group, Parminder Kaur Kondral; and comedian and rapper Jonathan Bentill, 19.

Mr Khan saluted the 'great efforts of those who laid down their lives for their nation', adding 'we live in Hackney in peace'.

Reverend Rob Wickham led a moving church service attended by 680 people including Lieutenant Colonel Roderick Morris; the Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe; Deputy Mayor, Cllr Sophie Linden; Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sharon Patrick; MP for Hackney North and Stoke Newington, Dianne Abbott; as well as those who took part in the parade and members of the wider community who came to pay their respects.

A picture is worth a thousand words

A NEW mosaic crafted by a team of dedicated volunteers has been unveiled in Hackney Downs by comedian Russell Brand.

The mosaic is the result of a nine-month project undertaken by the community and members of the Hackney Drug and Alcohol Team project, Lifeline, which supports people recovering from addiction. English as a Second Language students were also involved.

Former drug addict Russell said: "This is a symbol of what we can achieve when we come together and work together. It's something the whole community can be proud of."

The mosaic is the third in a series designed by artist Tessa Hunkin. She and her team of volunteers also created mosaics for Shepherdess Walk Park, in Hoxton, and on the corner of Old Street and Pitfield Street. The project has been funded by the Council for three years.

Tessa said: "Mosaic is a common language used by all. We have had volunteers of all ages and backgrounds, and from countries as diverse as Vietnam and Estonia, and we have all been brought together by that same language." The mosaic covers a shelter in the children's playground at Hackney Downs. It features wild animals including leopards, monkeys, wolves, gazelles, camels and bears.

The focus of the piece is an animal pursuit, beginning with a mouse startling an elephant which sets off a chain reaction involving lots of different creatures. All the animal images have their names next to them, and the idea is that children can recognise the different species and enjoy learning the words.

Tessa added: "The location of the children's playground gave us an opportunity to do something completely different from the Shepherdess Walk mosaics. "We could branch out from local flora and fauna and concentrate on more spectacular wild animals because they are so popular with small children."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, also attended the event on 6 November.

He said: "The volunteers have worked with extraordinary dedication and care, coming together to create really beautiful work that will be enjoyed by local people for years to come."

"This is a great example of the Council supporting local people to make a positive difference to their community."

This year's Hackney Sports Award winners covered a range of ages and activities

THIS year's Hackney Sports Awards recognised some outstanding achievements by residents young and old.

The ceremony, compered by comedian Kat B, took place in front of a sold-out Hackney Empire on 4 November. The popular host was joined by sprinter Harry Aikines-Aryeetey, 28, a gold medallist at this year's European Athletic Championships; and former GB sprinter Jeanette Kwakye. There was also a performance from Tropical Isles carnival group, who wowed the audience with their vibrant costumes and dance routines.

“These awards allow us to recognise and thank all those who support and organise sports on a voluntary basis”

Jeanette presented awards for a host of impressive performances at this year's London Youth Games, for which she is an ambassador. Hackney came sixth overall, which is the borough's highest place in over 30 years. Hackney also won the trophy for 'most improved borough' and broke all previous records, for the third year running, for participation and achievement.

Kamil Nowak, 17, from BSix Sixth Form College, is part of the Hackney boys' volleyball team which won 'most improved team' in the London Youth Games. He said: "I'm shocked. We trained our hardest and did our best. Our goal is to improve even more next year."

A new set of awards were also given out this year to young people that demonstrated unrivalled dedication to their sport. The Pride of Hackney awards were presented to 11 individuals who won medals in more than one sport. One winner, Emily Downey, 15, from Lea Rowing Club, said: "The rowing team didn't know each other previously, so we had to work really hard to make it happen."

Pupils from Stoke Newington School were overjoyed to receive the London Youth Games school challenge award, while Grasmere Primary School took the personal best accolade.

Fashion designer James Long's studio is based at The Tramperry, London Fields. To celebrate and support local businesses he has designed this year's 'Love Local, Shop Local' tote bag (pictured)

Making it in the fashion world

FASHION designer James Long was first hailed as 'one to watch' when he launched his menswear collection at London Fashion Week in 2007. Since then, he has seen his clothing worn by pop stars, and has won a number of awards.

But James didn't always dream of becoming a fashion designer. Born and schooled in Northampton in the 1980s, he says: "I didn't get into fashion when I was younger as I didn't know what it was. I loved clothes, and had an eye for fashion, but interior design and architecture always interested me more."

James studied art, design and fashion at Northampton Nene College, the London College of Fashion, and the Royal College of Art. He also gained valuable experience across the pond, working with veteran fashion designer, Virginia Bates, in New York.

James moved to Hackney in 2004 and opened his own studio here in 2006. He's now based at The Tramperry, London Fields, a location he says 'has always had a strong creative community and that isn't like anywhere else'. Since launching into the fashion spotlight, James's signature style of over-sized knitted designs and the use of leather has continued to develop.

He says: "Fashion is about changing and it's important as a fashion designer that I keep moving forward, evolving, and always learning. If I'm not learning I wouldn't want to do it anymore."

In his studio, sketches of clothing, new designs, fabrics, colours and inspirational photos cover

“Fashion is about changing and it's important as a fashion designer that I keep moving forward, evolving”

every surface.

Talking about his inspiration for designs, James says: "It is what your life is and how you live it – building a collection is best when you are physically involved with the clothes that are inspired by your travels and experiences, it's about talking and keeping your eyes open. It's about being involved with life."

Embellishing on the process he undertakes when creating a collection, James says: "It never really stops. It starts with a conversation about ideas and a general narrative, and then about understanding the shape and researching fashion from other locations like Milan or Paris. My designs change depending on the season and, when selling clothes internationally, you need to think about the weight and fabrics."

Across the road from The Tramperry is the Hackney campus of the London College of Fashion, where many young people are studying fashion, with their own dreams of becoming a designer.

James provides some sound advice for the budding designers of the future. He says: "You need to surround yourself with a great team of people who believe in the same ideas as you do. It's also about talking about designs and challenging ideas. The talent is training your eye and knowing when something is right, or wrong, and when something needs changing."

With Hackney regarded as a fashion destination in its own right, James is happy to make it his home and workplace.

He says: "My Hackney studio at The Tramperry is amazing. It's helping people to stay working in the borough and become involved in the community."

To celebrate and support local businesses, James has designed this year's 'Love Local, Shop Local' tote bag (pictured above), available for free in range of shops across the borough.

All your green questions answered

Q: What can I do with flowers when they have wilted and died? I don't have a garden so don't have a brown bin garden waste collection.

A: You can put small amounts of cut flowers in your food recycling bin. If you have a doorstep collection, put it in your blue bin outside your home. If you live in a block or estate, put it in the nearest communal food waste bin. The flowers will be mixed with food and garden waste and turned into compost.

How to use your blue bins

Place your small blue caddy in your kitchen with a compostable liner in it.

A: When the liner is full, tie it and put it in your large blue bin outside.

B: If you live in a block with shared bins, place your compostable liner into your communal food waste recycling bin.

Put all your raw and cooked food waste in your blue bin. This includes vegetables, meat, fish, fruit, bread, rice, teabags, egg shells and cheese. Do not put any plastic, paper, glass or packaging in.

Food waste in plastic bags can not be recycled. You must only use compostable liners.

Recycle food waste

A NEW campaign to encourage residents to save £1million a year by recycling food waste has been launched by the Council.

People in Hackney throw about 18,000 tonnes of food in the bin per year – enough to fill up London Fields Lido every week. This represents about one third of household rubbish in the borough, yet it could all be recycled.

The campaign, called Hackney's Food Recycling Experiment, aims to dispel the myths about food waste recycling and encourages people to give it a try.

As part of the scheme, residents are given small blue bins to keep in their kitchen and free

“ Recycling food is good for the environment as it is turned into compost ” compostable liners.

The waste is collected every week from people's front gardens or communal bins on estates.

The Council collects food waste from 95 per cent of households, but if everyone recycled as much as possible, the borough would save about £1million a year in disposal costs.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Hackney's recycling services have improved dramatically over the last decade, and most people recycle paper, glass, metals and plastic. However, a lot of food is still needlessly thrown in the bin. Not only will recycling food help us reduce the amount of money we have to spend on disposal, but it is good for the environment as it is turned into compost and used in our parks, gardens and allotments."

Residents who take part in the experiment could win £100. Just tag a post on Twitter and Instagram with #HackneyFood before 15 December, or fill in a feedback form at: www.hackney.gov.uk/food

How polar bears once roamed Hackney

A FREE talk about Hackney's fascinating geology and geodiversity is due to take place on 1 December.

The event is the second in a series of biodiversity talks organised as part of the Council's commitment to create more spaces for wildlife in the borough.

Led by living landscape manager at the London Wildlife Trust, Alister Hayes, the talk will examine the borough's ecological history and reveal some fascinating facts including how polar bears and reindeer once roamed Hackney Marshes.

Alister will explain how geology affects the landscape and there will also be a focus on the Lea Valley's reservoirs, which supply drinking water to North and East London.

'Living Landscapes, Natural Heritage and Geology' takes place on 1 December, at 7pm, in Hackney Marshes Centre, Homerton Road, E9 5PF.

To book a place, e-mail: rvneste@wildlondon.org.uk; or call: 020 802 4573. Places are limited.

First Love

20 November to 13 December, Arcola Theatre, 24 Ashwin Street, E8 3DL

SAMUEL Beckett's tragicomedy stars Conor Lovett (pictured) as a man who finds himself sleeping on a park bench after losing his home. There, he meets a prostitute and becomes infatuated with her.

This production by Irish theatre company Gare St Lazare is described as 'a perfect blend of tragedy and comedy ... a powerful, lyrical tale from one of the twentieth century's most celebrated writers'.

The narrator then embarks on a relationship, which is turned on its head when the object of his affections becomes pregnant.

Originally written in 1948, but not published until 1971, 'First Love' is widely regarded as one of Beckett's finest works.

JONNY WOO'S EAST LONDON LECTURE

PREVIEW

Jonny Woo's East End Lecture

27 November - 6 December, Rose Lipman Building, N1 5SQ

THE acclaimed performance artist Jonny Woo is debuting new work at the Rose Lipman Building, which seeks to understand how alternative culture transformed Shoreditch from an urban wasteland into the capital of cool. 'Jonny Woo's East London Lecture' examines the 20 year period of 'nu-history' which saw the area changed radically by an influx of artists, designers, web geeks, fashionistas, DJs and club kids – attracted by Shoreditch's low rents and semi-lawless feel – which was the catalyst for a dramatic process of regeneration, the mainstream appropriation of alternative culture and the eventual 'hipster' backlash. The show uses stories from a collection of 50 friends, long-term residents and newcomers to document the phenomenon of 'how Shoreditch happened' and the resulting effects, both good and bad. As part of the development of the project, people are encouraged to visit the East London Lecture Facebook event page and contribute stories, memories, opinions, and retro party snaps to create conversation about the topics the show explores. The resulting 'lecture' promises to be a dynamic verbatim theatre piece directed by Douglas Rintoul and produced by the Mill Co Project. The Deserted Village

21 to 30 November, The Depot, 38 Upper Clapton Road, E5

AN exhibition about the regeneration and redevelopment of an old tram depot in Upper Clapton, and the artistic community based there, is set to open on 21 November. 'The Deserted Village' charts the history of those who have inhabited the studios above The Depot over the past 30 years. The space used to be home to a community of artists, musicians and small businesses and is set to be redeveloped next year. The exhibition, part of Photomonth East London, documents the stories of those who worked at The Depot through photographs, audio clips and loaned artefacts. The project aims to explore the impact of micro-communities on the larger area, and will examine how regeneration shapes history. Since the complex opened in 1873, it has housed metal workshops, carpenters, foam cutters, locksmiths and car mechanics. Tucked away above these spaces were artists' studios.

Danny Easterbrook, a painter based at the site, says: "It had a really interesting mix of businesses and tenants. You had a Turkish garage, a Cypriot joiner, a Jewish joiner, a bunch of furniture polishers, a sweet company, an upholsterers, various carpenters and furniture makers all mixed up together, different races all intermingling and everybody helping and having fun." The exhibition is created by Tilley Harris and Alex Pielak of digital media company Voist, who have been at The Depot for two years. For more info. visit: thedepotclapton.com/the-deserted-village/

Hackney's got talent

SOME of the most talented young musicians and singers in the borough gathered at the Hackney Empire for the annual Music Service Gala.

The event took place on 6 November, with performances from Hackney's schools, bands, orchestras and choirs.

The night gave the borough's young people an opportunity to display their musical prowess with performances from the Hackney Borough Youth Choir and Hackney Creative Jazz Ensemble.

The gala also incorporates the Mayor's Music Awards, a fund established to provide support for some of the borough's brightest musical talent.

“Hackney is home to some incredible young talent as the Music Service Gala proved”

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: “Hackney is home to some incredible young talent, as the Music Service Gala proved, but as any parent knows, funding music lessons, instruments and competitions can be costly.

“I don't want this to be a barrier to any young person pursuing their passion, so I'm pleased the Council is able to provide financial assistance through this awards programme.”

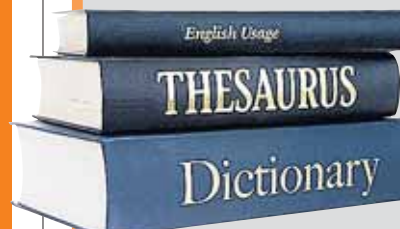

The judging panel was impressed with the quality of every application, and the breadth and range of musical opportunities in schools.

This year's winners were: Jubilee Primary School, N16, and The City Academy, E9 (excellence in music education practice); Queensbridge Primary School, E8, and Mossbourne Community Academy, E5, (instrument fund for ensemble development); Berkan Ulgudur and Aleyna Kuran (pupils' award for music achievement in instrumental learning); and Cardinal Pole Catholic School, E5, (certificate of acknowledgment for significant improvements in the music department).

ESOL students given a 'lifeline' after completing English course

OVER 240 residents, who originally hail from across the globe, have completed English speaking classes. Certificates were presented to 140 of them by the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sharon Patrick, for passing an English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) course run by the Council's Adult Learning Services. The ceremony took place at the Hackney Empire on 14 October.

Cllr Patrick said: “Congratulations to all the students and teachers involved in the course. These courses are an absolute lifeline and I wish the students well in using their new-found skills in the community.”

Awards were also given to members of staff who went above and beyond the call of duty in running the courses, including Katrin Karlsdottir from Wentworth Children's Centre; Jonathon Mead from Woodberry Down Children's Centre; and Nevin Topuzoglu from Ann Tayler Children's Centre. ESOL teacher Cal Marcus also received a special mention.

Ginette Makila, who came to Hackney from Madagascar, said: “When I came to this country I couldn't speak English, when I went shopping I needed someone with me, but now I can do everything myself.”

Skinners' Academy's careers fair gives advice about work and higher education

A CAREERS awareness fair at Skinners' Academy featured representatives from 18 universities – including Oxford, Cambridge and UCL – as well as 20 national and international businesses and organisations.

The event on 21 October was targeted at Year 11 students at local schools, who received advice on how to get into a variety of industries as well as higher education.

Organisations including BT, Telegraph Media Group, Natural History Museum and Arcola Theatre joined representatives from universities in a bid to inspire and inform students considering future careers.

The day kicked off with a presentation from Yasmin Ali, named Women's Engineer of the Year, who is an operations engineer at EON. Zoe Hughes, a curator at the Natural History Museum, also gave a talk. She said: “Having had a bad experience of careers when I was at school I think this is a really positive event.”

The feedback from pupils was positive. Student Julianna Kuczik said: “The careers fair has given me a better understanding of the courses on offer at universities, as well as the job opportunities available.”

Safiya Caesar added: “I got to ask the professionals questions directly, and got some really good advice.”

Tennis rebo-lution

Hackney youngsters were joined by tennis coaches Mark Petchey and Adrian Hutchins at the launch of the REBOWall

By Dila Tumer

LOCAL children joined tennis star Mark Petchey at a Hackney youth centre, to mark the start of a national campaign to make the sport more accessible to youngsters.

Former British number one and one-time coach of Wimbledon winner Andy Murray, Mark, officially unveiled the REBOWall on 4 November at Young Hackney Concorde Centre, in Homerton.

Calum, nine, who attended the launch, said: "I only play football but I now play tennis too and I just love hitting a tennis ball. I can hit eight shots in a row

“This is the start of a tennis revolution, a rebo-lution, to get more kids playing tennis”

Children play tennis on the free-standing, adjustable practice REBOWall against the REBOWall, but my friend can hit 12, so I'm coming here to practise every day until I beat him."

The free-standing, adjustable practice wall allows young people to develop their serve and volley on their own, with a playing partner, or coach.

Adrian Hutchins, founder of the company which makes the wall, said: "This is the start of a tennis revolution, a rebo-lution, to get more kids playing tennis from non-traditional environments."

Mark and Adrian were joined by eight children, aged 8 to 10, for the unveiling of the wall which was installed this summer.

Mark said: "A tennis court takes up an enormous amount of space and you can really only have four people playing at one time.

"With a REBOWall you can have a bigger group of kids playing together, having a good time. I do feel it's massively important to make tennis more accessible and it is great to see so many kids have the opportunity to play tennis, some for the very first time."

Ways into Work apprentice scoops London Councils award

A HACKNEY apprentice has been presented with the London Councils 'best contribution by a new apprentice' award.

Helen Osibodu, 20, has been working with Hackney Council's 'Ways into Work' scheme, which matches residents' skills to suitable employers.

She said: "It's an honour to receive this award and to be recognised for the contribution that I've made to the team and the Council.

"Being an apprentice has given me the skills and encouragement to set up my own projects and a better idea of my future career aspirations to work with people to find employment.

"Without the apprenticeship, I wouldn't have had the opportunity to discover what I really wanted to do and build my skills to meet my career goals."

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, presented the award to Helen at a ceremony in Merchant Taylors' Hall on 25 September.

The Ways Into Work team has helped to place 761 people in apprenticeships, since April 2010, at a range of Hackney businesses including those within the technological, hospitality and creative industries.

Winners of digital enterprise scheme receive award from the Duke of York

THE winners of a youth-focused digital enterprise award have received £15,000 and business support to take their idea to market.

The iDEA competition aims to support young people to establish digital businesses and develop their critical skills along the way.

Winning team, Risha

and Sumita Jindal, began their journey at Hackney Community College (HCC) in July, when Risha signed up to a workshop. She was assigned a business mentor and benefitted from tailored activities with industry experts.

The sisters' 'Digimeal' app, wowed judges at a final held in

Buckingham Palace on 14 October, when they were presented with an award by the Duke of York (pictured). Their winning idea was one of just three chosen out of 600 entries from across the UK.

Low-cost cookery app Digimeal is designed for students and generates healthy meal ideas using three ingredients.

Risha told the BBC: "We didn't even think we'd get through the first stage and that seems like a million years ago."

HCC principal Ian Ashman added: "We are so proud that one of the first winning businesses came through the iDEA scheme at HCC."

The scheme is set to be rolled out nationally, and aims to help one million young people develop digital and enterprise skills, and establish 500 digital business startups and 50 successful digital businesses run by 14 to 25-year-olds within five years.

A MAN from Hackney who was left paralysed by a brain injury has been shortlisted for a national award for the 'inspirational way he rebuilt his life'.

Keith Emmanuel, 52, suffered a brain haemorrhage 10 years ago. He was left in a coma and spent nine months in the Royal London Hospital.

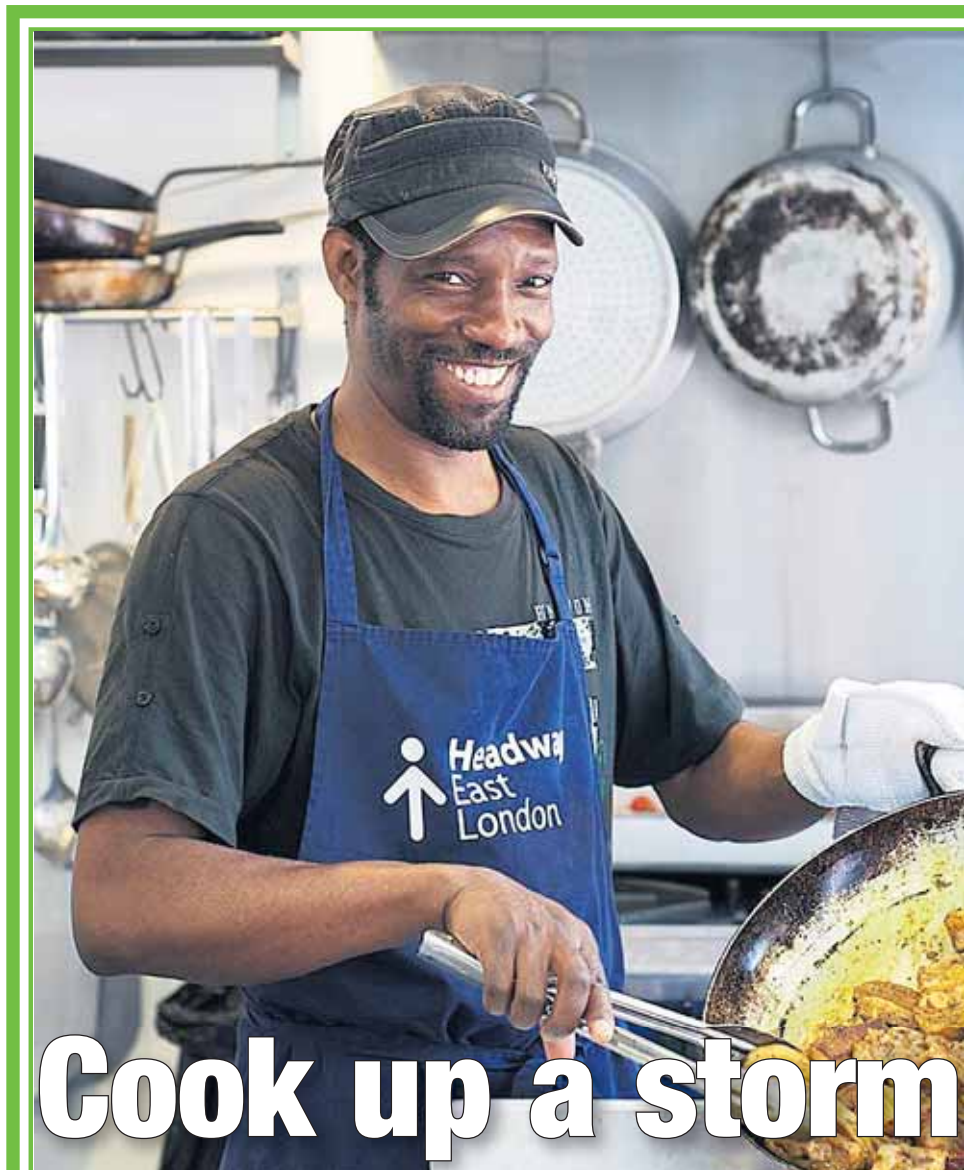

He had to relearn the most basic of life skills, and since discovering brain injury charity Headway East London in 2007, has become a valued volunteer at its headquarters in Kingsland Road.

Keith has taken on a key organisational role with the charity's kitchen project, and from not being able to hold a fork, he now plans, prepares and serves food to visitors from across East London, as well as supporting other members to do the same.

Keith has also helped raise £3,500 for the charity through his involvement with fundraising projects.

He said: "I'm very honoured to have been nominated for the achiever of the year award. It was a very difficult time for my family, particularly after my brain injury caused me to be partially paralysed for a long time after the incident, but they stuck by me throughout everything. When I managed to say 'hello mum' for the first time, it brought such a big smile to her face."

Keith was nominated for

Cook up a storm

Brain injury survivor Keith Emmanuel has been nominated for a national award by Headway East London the award by kitchen project coordinator, Kate de Syllas. She said: "Keith has become an excellent spokesperson for our group with his gentle, approachable, and truly honest nature."

"His total commitment to the kitchen project has given his fellow members the confidence, as well as a platform, to showcase the skills they have learned – or indeed relearned – since their brain injury."

Headway provides support to brain injury survivors, their families and carers, as well as to health and legal professionals. It has more than 100 branches throughout the UK. Each year, its national awards celebrate the exceptional efforts of survivors of brain injury, and those caring for them. An awards ceremony is set to take place on 5 December.

New project gives more help to unpaid LGBT carers

UNPAID carers from the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) community are set to benefit from a new project launched this month.

LGBT carers are invited to join a support group and access advice on services, benefits and housing, advocacy, befriending and counselling. The project is supported by the Big Lottery Fund.

Katharine Collins, project co-ordinator, said: "Our research has highlighted a need for a supportive community which carers feel they belong to. LGBT carers can be very isolated as many do not have the support of their family or local community."

The next LGBT carers group will be held on

20 November at 6pm in City and Hackney Carers Centre, 10 Church Crescent, E9 7DL. Any LGBT carers in Hackney who look after someone that is unwell, has a disability, mental illness or addiction, can contact the project on: 020 8533 0951; or e-mail: lgbt@hackneycarers.org.uk

Health grants scheme closing

PEOPLE with innovative ideas to help improve residents' health have until 19 December to submit a bid for funding. The Healthier Hackney Fund was launched by the Council in September with £300,000 set aside for grants to community groups and organisations which can demonstrate how their project would make an impact in the borough. Priority areas are smoking, mental health, substance misuse and sexual health.

Alongside larger grants, any local group can bid for £1,000 to support activities that will contribute to their community's health and wellbeing, or bring people together in a positive way. For more info, visit: news.hackney.gov.uk/healthier-hackney-fund

Mouth Cancer Action Month

NOVEMBER is Mouth Cancer Action Month and people are being urged not to ignore tell-tale symptoms.

Mouth cancer kills more than 2,000 people each year in the UK, more than testicular and cervical cancer combined. Many of these deaths could have been avoided if treatment had begun earlier.

Early warning signs include a mouth ulcer that does not heal within three weeks; white or red patches in the mouth; numbness of the tongue or mouth; a lump in any part of the mouth or neck; difficulty swallowing; a feeling that something is stuck in the throat; unexplained wobbly teeth or an unexpected change in the voice. Anyone with concerns should make an appointment with a dentist as soon as possible. Key causes of mouth cancer include smoking, chewing tobacco, shisha, khat, alcohol and an unhealthy diet. For more info, visit: www.nhs.uk/conditions/cancer-of-the-mouth

Feed your family for free

NEW community kitchens have been launched on estates across the borough, with the aim of improving healthy eating, tackling obesity and reducing social isolation by encouraging people to eat together.

The free 'cook and eat' programme, supported by the Council's Public Health team, is set to be expanded to nine estates this month.

Residents are invited to learn how to cook healthy and nutritional meals on a budget, and then sit down to eat together. The cooking courses are aimed at families with children (during lunch time or after school) and adults (on week nights).

They will be run by local providers including Made in Hackney, Shoreditch Trust and Helping Hackney Health. To find out more, or to book, call: 020 8356 6326; or e-mail: www.hackney.gov.uk/healthy-hackney

School for dissenting ministers

By Sally England

VISITORS to Cambridge University might be surprised to learn that Homerton College was originally based in Hackney.

In fact, the origins of the college can be traced back as far as 1695, and during the period between 1768 and 1895 it was situated in Homerton High Street.

Its roots lie in the late 17th century movement to educate dissenting ministers in modern subjects not taught at Oxford or Cambridge. Following the Toleration Act of 1689, dissenters were free to worship whatever their political beliefs, and in 1695 the Congregational churches set up a fund to give financial support to young men wishing to train for the ministry.

Academies were founded for the purpose, teaching a curriculum that included modern history, science and philosophy. Some of them were so successful that a group of orthodox London laymen, critical of what they regarded as spiritual laxity, met together in 1730 at the King's Head inn in the City, to discuss how to reform the institutions. They became known as the King's Head Society and devised a specialist six year training course for pupils.

But the teaching at the academies using their curriculum still fell short of the strict standards the society desired, so in 1768 its members bought a mansion, in what is now Homerton High Street, as a permanent site for their own academy. By 1800, nearly 150 students had been educated there.

In 1801, a new science and classics tutor with a deep passion for knowledge arrived – John

The college from Homerton High Street, 1886

Pye-Smith – who was to remain at Homerton until 1850. Pye-Smith created a wide-reaching course of theological study, as well as teaching geography, astronomy, logic, psychology, physics, chemistry, rhetoric, theology, Hebrew, algebra and geometry.

Pye-Smith's talents attracted better students, and in 1811, the building was enlarged to offer each one a bedroom and private study. In 1817, the King's Head Society was dissolved and replaced with the Homerton Academy Society, devoted to the support and governance of the institution. When the old building was condemned as unsafe in 1822, a new one was erected to replace it and the name was changed to Homerton College.

In 1850, the Homerton College Society joined with Highbury College and Coward Trustee's College in Southampton Row to set up the purely theological New College in Finchley, removing that function from Homerton College which now needed to find a new purpose if it was to survive.

Luckily, the London Congregational Board of Education was already involved in the provision of day schools attached to their churches and recognised the need to offer suitable training. It was decided the focus at Homerton should be on training teachers, both male and female, rather than ministers. The college was again rebuilt at a cost of £10,000 and reopened in 1852.

But by the late 19th century, what had once been a leafy rural village when the original academy opened was now a densely populated London suburb, rife with disease, leading to a student dying every year between 1878 and 1885 from typhoid, tuberculosis or smallpox.

It was decided the college needed to move to a cleaner, healthier location, and in 1894, the former Cavendish

College in Cambridge was purchased. Following the move to its new home in 1896, Homerton College became a women-only establishment for the next 80 years.

No traces of the old Homerton academy now survive, but students at the Cambridge college still play an annual match against Leyton Orient FC, as the club grew out of the football section of Glyn Cricket Club, itself founded by former students of the old Homerton College to keep fit during the winter.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.

Baked apples

1 apple, 1 serving

Preparation time
10 mins

Cooking time
35 mins

Ingredients

- Cooking apples (however many you want to serve)
- Dried dates
- Cloves
- Honey
- Brandy
- Brown sugar.

Method

- Preheat the oven to 200°C. Core the apples and score a circle round their middles – this stops the apple collapsing or exploding
- Pack the hole in each apple with a chopped date, 2 cloves, 1 tbsp honey and 1 tbsp brandy. Top with 1 tbsp brown sugar
- Bake for 35 minutes. Serve with crème fraîche, ice cream, cream or yoghurt.

Hackney Matters is an online community, made up of people from a range of backgrounds and ages, which regularly completes surveys about Council services. Issues addressed include the future of Hackney's streets, parks, education and public health.

Panel members have access to a website where they can find out about the Council's plans for many future developments in the borough. The surveys are completed online in panel members' own time, although they will occasionally be invited into the Council for focus groups and events.

Panel members are rewarded for giving their time to the community by being entered into free prize draws and competitions. They also earn reward points that can be redeemed on the high street.

Since last month, more than 140 residents have signed-up to be part of the Hackney Matters panel, taking the total number of members to over 1,400. Throughout November, the sign-up reward for panel members for 'inviting a friend' is £10. For more info, visit: www.hackneymatters.org; or call: 020 8356 7527.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

Under Section 71 of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990

In accordance with the above act, notice is hereby given of a public meeting on the proposed Conservation Area Management Guidelines for the Hackney Wick Conservation Area and the Fish Island and White Post Lane Conservation Area.

On 30th April 2014 the Board of the London Legacy Development Corporation (the Legacy Corporation) agreed to approve designation of extensions to the Hackney Wick Conservation Area and the Fish Island Conservation Area (renamed Fish Island and White Post Lane Conservation Area). This follows an extensive consultation that took place between December 2013 and February 2014.

Under Section 71, of the 'Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990', the Legacy Corporation, as a Local Planning Authority, now has a duty (a) to formulate and publish its proposals for the preservation and enhancement of the conservation areas and (b) to submit them for consideration to a public meeting in the area to which they relate.

The Legacy Corporation's proposals for the preservation and enhancement of the Hackney Wick Conservation Area and the Fish Island and White Post Lane

Conservation Area are contained in the two sets of Management Guidelines which can be accessed at: <http://queenelizabetholympicpark.co.uk/planning-authority/planning-policy/conservation-areas>

The public meeting at which the two sets of Management Guidelines will be considered will be held on Wednesday 10th December 2014, between 5.00 – 7.00 pm, at The White Building, Unit 7, Queen's Yard, White Post Lane, London, E9 5EN.

Members of the public are invited to attend the meeting in order to express their views on the proposed Management Guidelines. The Legacy Corporation will have regard to the views expressed at the meeting when finalising the Management Guidelines.

If you would like to attend the meeting, please confirm your attendance by contacting the Planning Policy team on 020 3288 1800 or email: planningpolicy@londonlegacy.co.uk

PUBLIC NOTICE

17-20 PARR STREET, HACKNEY

From October 2014 – November 2015 Bay Construct Ltd, the appointed principal contractor, will be on site re-developing 17-20 Parr Street. We will be delivering a new build mixed use development consisting of 24 luxury apartments and 10,500sqft of commercial office/retail space. The apartments will comply with sustainable homes level 4 and will be arranged from first to fourth floors, with two lifts serving each floor. Access is via a stylish entrance foyer on Parr Street, which also provides access to a resident’s private landscaped courtyard to the rear.

Bay Construct and all of their sites, are listed under the ‘Considerate Constructors Scheme’. This is an important key tool for Bay Construct Ltd as it provides local communities reassurance that outstanding performance and consideration will be applied during all phases of the construction process. We therefore always give due consideration to ensure our
